The National Dress of Scotland

The National Dress of Scotland still remains today a reflection of the national character of the Scottish people and is a symbol of the most fascinating combination of national pride and brotherhood, inspired by the Clan system.

Originally suited to the needs of the way of life of a rugged, pastoral and sometimes warlike people, Highland Dress may be said not to have altered fundamentally since the eighteenth century. Yet in matters of detail, each generation has introduced modifications and changes and adaptations have taken place. It is both practical and fashionable and can safely be selected for virtually every occasion.

Wearing Highland Dress requires expert advice based on knowledge of past tradition and present trends, combined with modern skills and production methods.

Kinloch Anderson are renowned for their unrivalled reputation in this field, and hold Royal Appointments as Tailors and Kiltmakers to HM The Queen, HRH The Duke of Edinburgh and HRH The Prince of Wales.

Kinloch Anderson

Formerly William Anderson and Sons Ltd., and an independent Company for five generations, Kinloch Anderson has been known and respected for well over a century in Scotland's Capital City, as makers and retailers of fine clothing and Highland Dress.

Originally, as civilian and military tailors, Kinloch Anderson developed a particular expertise in Tartans and Kiltmaking, and tailored officers' uniforms for all the famous Scottish regiments.

Today, as foremost experts in Highland Dress, Kinloch Anderson's Highland Dress Room has the finest selection of top quality kilt outfits and accessories.

In 1990, when the Company moved to its present headquarters in Leith, it created its own small museum - The Heritage of Kinloch Anderson. This is a unique and fascinating exhibition which features The Royal Tartans, kiltmaking and regimental and civilian uniforms.

As high quality clothing manufacturers, Kinloch Anderson are market leaders in the production of elegant, classic skirts and kilted skirts in tartans, tweeds, checks and plain colours; these are not only sold in the Retail Shop and within the UK but also throughout Europe, North America and the Far East and through worldwide mail order service. In 1979 the Company's export performance was recognised by the receipt of The Queen's Award for Export Achievement.

Long established knowledge of tartans, Highland Dress and the textile industry, expertise in the design, manufacture and marketing of clothing and accumulated knowledge of fine Scottish merchandise in all its aspects, has led to the development of The Corporate Identity Division. This rapidly expanding Division responds to the needs of companies who want to project their image and identity through specially designed tartans, clothing and accessories.

For the past decade in Japan, and more recently in Taiwan and South Korea, Kinloch Anderson has been building a significant Licence business, based on the image and lifestyle associated with the Kinloch Anderson brand name. Top quality licensee companies produce a wide range of merchandise, ranging from men's and ladies clothing, ties, scarves and leathersgoods to household textiles and stationery.
